ARUM IN ABITHMETIC.

BY SICHOLAS NICHOUS.

There came into school one day
A white-heired man. With pleasant smile He greeted us, and sitting down, Said he would like in rest awhile. Twes time to have Arithmetic." The teacher coid : "Now all give heed;

Put up your hooks and take your slates, And do the sum whilele I will reed." Our books went in, our slates came out,

And then the teacher read the sum; We tried and tried and tried and tried again, Hut couldn't make the answer come. And then the old men eedd to us-With kindness twinkling in his eyes-

A silver shilling for a prize." Then Tommy Bols resolved to cheet, Ant slyly taking out his book, When he supposed he was not seen, A hasty glauce inside he took.

At once the nnewer Tommy finds, "And now I've got it, sir," he crice.
The reacher thinks Tom worked the sum
And tells him he has won the price.

But that o'd man had even it oll: These twinkling eyes had watched the trick Well done, my boy," he said, "you seem To understand Arithmetic.

But row, before I give the prise, I'll lel you try o harder eum : Another chilling you shall have If you can tell how that is dons."

What shall it profit, toy lad, To gain the world and lose your soul? Then Tominy Hole hung down his head, The tears begon to fill his eyes -

He would not take the rilver prize.

And then, with kir dest vuice and look,

Ils gently said to Tomiay Hole:

COUNTING THE ELEPTORAL VOTE. Remarks of Hon. John Young Brown, Of Kentucky. In the thunse of Rep-resentatives, Feldny, Jan. 26, 1877.

The merchant, trader, banker, farmer, lawver, citizen of every vocation, are virtually interested in our work, for the prosperity of their business and their political rights depend upon the public pence and maintenance of law. If this bill involved the surrender of any constitutional right which honor and duty dictated should be jealously and inviolably held, I should scout it; but I feel sure that it does not. Defeat it, and we are afloat on the mad current of political passions, with agreement between rival parties rendered impossible, and

The adoption of this compromise, it may so call it, will be a new proof, I trust, of the stability of our institutions. Such excitement and commotion us we have had in this political contest would have resulted in civil war and in the downtall ol almost any government on curth save this. I have said I have faith in the cause of my party. Let truth prevail, the right conquer; let fraud be hunted down and rebuked. I want no victory founded upon injustice and wrong. THE DEATH TRAP. A Couple of Wood Ratchers Buill the Ashtuhula Reidge.

[From the New York Graphic]

The real facts about the building of he Ashtabula bridge are coming out on the inquest, and, no was expected, they imply extreme culpability in the builders and reflect disgrace on the way things are done in this country. Congdon, the bridge-builder testities that he was employed by the road at that time as master machinist; that the material supplied was sufficient for the work; that he did not consider himself competent to build the bridge and told the company's officers so : that they, notwithstanding this frank confession, put into his hands somelody else's plans, and told him to build the bridge as well as he could; that he gave orders 'to Mr. Rogers' to have it put up; that Mr. Rogers came to him and acknowedged his ignorance of bridge building also; that they confessed their lack of skill to each other, and at last, under orders, they joined forces, each told the other what he knew, and they guessed at the rest, and the finished bridge was the result of their aggregate competency. This, we blush to say, is thoroughly American. No such thing ould possitly happen in any other country. "We "pick up" our trades instead of learning them, we appoint our most responsible officers such as engineers, as the result of favoritism rather than competitive skill; we rush ahead dash ahead, "gone to dinner, back in fifteen minutes," louild bridges with 'whoop hurrah," and when our trestle toy tumbles flown, we solemuly pretend to be bewildered, and attribute the slaughter to the inscrutable hand of which I shall are every effort to do. of the sheriff, and he is taking care of Providence.
